NMR COLLECTIONS: RAILWAY STATIONS

About the catalogue

This volume is arranged alphabetically by county, district and civil parish or non-parished area. Where no county identification has been possible entries appear at the beginning of the catalogue.

For each administrative area the buildings, monuments or more general subjects (eg street scenes or landscapes) represented in the archive are presented as follows: unattributed general views (blank caption) and unidentified buildings followed by an alphabetical listing of named and addressed buildings and monuments. Street scenes are found under the name of the street.

The names of structures comprising a complex of buildings are expressed in a hierarchy, with the principal or generic name first. For example, the Royal Mausoleum at Frogmore House would appear as:

FROGMORE HOUSE, ROYAL MAUSOLEUM

Similarly, tombs or monuments within churches or cathedrals would appear after the name of the building:

ST PAULS CATHEDRAL, WELLINGTON TOMB

In all requests for archive, please quote the identification number of the required item(s). These appear in bold at the beginning of each entry.

NMR ARCHIVES: RAILWAY STATIONS

History and Description of the Collection

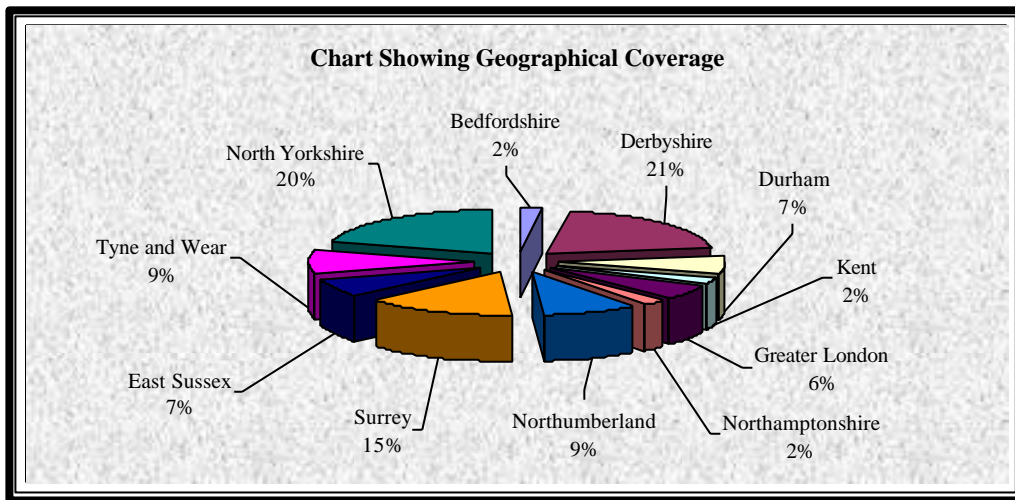

The archive is composed of 88 (8 x 6.5ins) black and white original prints of railway architecture, dating from the 1950s. These original prints were produced from negatives held by the Air Ministry, which became the Ministry of Defence (Air) in 1964. No other information on their provenance is known.

Each print has a former identification number issued by the Air Ministry and a short caption recording the monument name and geographic location.

The collection was catalogued in detail in April 2000 by the NMR Archives External Accessions Team.

Geographical Coverage

The chart below shows the major county composition of the collection

The collection covers eleven English counties. However the counties of North Yorkshire and Derbyshire account for the largest proportion of images (41%), recording stations on the London Midland and Eastern lines. Coverage also includes architecture in the Southern railway region.

Subject Coverage

The collection provides an excellent record of railway stations across the country during the 1950s. The coverage ranges from major city stations like St Pancras to small town stations like Battle, East Sussex to country and suburban railways such as Etchingham, East Sussex and Box Hill, Surrey. Over 90% of the collection show the exteriors of the stations both the station fronts and the platform areas. Just seven record interior views, including the ticket hall at Richmond Station, North Yorkshire and a goods shed at Hampton Court Station. The drinking fountain at Trent Station, Derbyshire should also be highlighted.

This small collection provides an insight into the working railway. Since these photographs were taken the function of some of these stations has changed. For example Richmond Station was closed and sold. Stations such as York (between 1922 and 1973), Monkwearmouth and North Road became museums.

Below is a list of the railway stations included in the collection:
